Practice

Corporate, Finance and Capital Markets

Myong-Ha ('m-young-ha') advises financial institutions, including mezzanine lenders, private equity sponsors and banks on structuring and negotiating financing transactions. She also works with companies and entrepreneurs on debt financings, corporate governance, and commercial transactions across industries such as manufacturing, technology, health care, retail and business services.

Her financing experience spans syndicated and multi-tiered loan facilities, acquisition financings, working capital facilities and refinancings, as well as mezzanine financings, restructurings, intercreditor arrangements and equity co-investments. In addition to her law firm experience, she has worked in-house and in business roles across technology and nonprofit sectors, providing her with a practical perspective on commercial transactions, including technology agreements and cross-border matters. Fluent in Korean, she applies her market familiarity to support cross-border deals.

With a focus on practical solutions, Myong-Ha works closely with clients to structure transactions that align with their business objectives. She is also Co-Chair of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Harvard Law School Women's Alliance.
